

Muslim 'Facebook' website is one of Europe's fastest growing dotcoms

Author: Moussa Ahmad

Source: BI-ME

Published: 14 April 2008

BACK

EMAIL TO

PRINT

RSS Feeds |

INTERNATIONAL. A Muslim equivalent of Yahoo!, Facebook and Youtube has been recognised as one of Europe's best tech start-ups by a leading American technology magazine. Internet phenomenon Muxlim.com has been selected as one of Europe's most successful new businesses by California-based Red Herring, a media company dedicated to business innovation and technology.

Muxlim.com was launched in 2006 by two Scandinavian-based entrepreneurs, with the objective of creating the most popular Muslim social media website in the world. Within a year that dream was realised and Muxlim.com attracted more than a million users from 190 countries across the globe.

Founder and CEO Mohamed El-Fatraty commented: "The recognition of Muxlim.com as one of Europe's most innovative and successful companies is a great honour for both the company and the Muslim community. Our objective was to create an online environment where Muslims and non-Muslims can enjoy social media in a safe and friendly atmosphere."

The growth of Internet use has been raising concerns amongst parents. A recent survey by the UK's London School of Economics (LSE), entitled 'EU Kids Online', discovered that more than 60% of British children have been accidentally exposed to adult material online. The figure for American children was also significant at 42%.

El-Fatraty commented: "We know that a huge number of Internet users, in particular parents, want access to an online experience that does not expose people to vulgarity, offensive content, and adult material. At the same time it's vital that social media is engaging, user-friendly and fun. Muxlim.com achieves all this, and we have attracted a vibrant and friendly community with a sense of humour."

El-Fatraty explained: "As all social media websites, we are continuously improving the services available to our users, and recently launched Muxlim TV, which allows our users to create their own online TV channel by uploading and sharing their videos."

"Our community has been very active in helping the moderation team ensure that uploaded content is appropriate for users of all ages. And within the next few weeks we will introduce My Muxlim, the first Muslim personalised-homepage and social networking service based on the Google OpenSocial platform, which allows users to add thousands of apps from different sites to their Muxlim.com profiles. In a few months, Muxlim Pal, will also be the first Muslim alternative to the likes of Second Life and other virtual worlds."

Some online virtual worlds and social media websites are already blocked from access in Muslim countries such as the UAE.

The Muxlim.com experience has attracted important advocates. Imran Akram, Chairman of Innovate Arts and founder of the Muslim Writers Awards, commented: "I welcome the availability of a safe and ethically-minded channel like Muxlim.com, as it provides users and parents with peace of mind that Muslim families can enjoy a complete online experience within a morally-centred environment. What makes this online community stand out is the creative and comedic user-generated content on display. If you want to appeal to young users then it's vital that your output is funny and engaging. The Muxlim.com community has proven that it's more than possible to discuss serious social issues through humour, and this website is a great resource for Muslims and non-Muslims alike."

Visit www.herringevents.com for the full list of 100 recognised Internet firms.

See also www.muxlim.com