

Seeing British Muslims through Sanders' lens

Staff Report

ISLAMABAD: Capturing images of lives of British Muslims, the British High Commission on Thursday held an exhibition titled 'Muslims in Britain', showcasing work of Peter Sanders, a leading photographer.

Images of Muslims in Britain, highlighting their traditions and ways of living also brought out the photographer's passion for covering each and every brief detail of his subject.

"Photography is a wonderful process. It's like a gift from God," says Sanders.

A photo titled 'Thompson and Thompson' portrayed the life of Richard and Danny Thompson – the distinguished musicians who came to fame as folk and rock performers in 1960's.

'Mosque with a Difference' is titled another photo showing Muslims pray in open fields of Britain. 'An International Family' demonstrates the life of Nur Riyadh, an English man, and his Japanese wife.

The display also carries pictures of the famous British composer, singer and musician Sami Yusuf, who is known for enthusing young people to love Prophet Muhammad (PBUH).

The event was organised in honour of a delegation of visiting British Muslims, recently visiting Pakistan. Azeem Ibrahim, Adeeba Malik, Muhammed Imran, Jeghangir Malik, Zareen Roohi Ahmed and Shahien Taj are the delegates.
